BEGINNING YOUR RESEARCH

The amount of research one could do for a Model UN conference is virtually limitless, but the amount of research one must do for the Tennessee YMCA Model UN is not!

ALL RESEARCH MUST BE SUBMITTED BY OCTOBER 5, 2009.

In order to maintain eligibility for conference awards and to be prepared for the challenges of your participation, the following research items are required for each DELEGATION:

III. BASIC COUNTRY INFORMATION

Please provide a minimum one-page, typed paper covering the following items as they concern the nation you have chosen to represent:

- Government (What type of government is in place?)
- Geography (Where is it located, what's close to it?)
- Economy (What is the state of the economy?)
- Culture (What are the people like? How do they live? Religion?)

IV. POSITION PAPERS

Each delegation is required to submit a total of four position papers. Your delegation will prepare one position paper on one topic from each of the four standing United Nations committees. You may not select your topics at random. Your advisor will provide you with a list of topics from which you may choose. Specific instructions on composing a position paper follow in this manual. Please follow those guidelines, as other delegates may rely on the information you provide. All position papers will be organized by committee, and will be available in their respective committees so that they might be used as resources for debate. Your position papers should be typed, and single-spaced is preferred to conserve paper!

GOOD LUCK!

Tennessee YMCA Model United Nations
POSITION PAPER GUIDELINES

After consulting the delegate guide published for the Berkley Model United Nations, the following guidelines have been adopted for the composition of position papers for the Tennessee YMCA Model United Nations. Each member state is required to submit a total of 4 position papers.

YOUR CONTENT SHOULD INCLUDE THE FOLLOWING:

I. Topic Description

To begin, you will choose one topic from each standing committee, from the list provided. Then, your position papers on each of your four chosen topics should begin with a topic description. Your topic description should provide you a context for the sections of your paper that will follow. In addition, this section should illustrate your understanding of the respective committee's role in the resolution of the conflict or topic. Think of the topic description in these terms: a reader with no previous knowledge of the topic should be able to fully understand the rest of your position paper after reading your topic description. Specifically, your topic description should include the following:

- Historical Background

You want to provide some historical background associated with the topic in order to understand the developments that lead to the current situation. As part of your historical background, describe any events that fueled the birth of the current topic. In addition, you might want to briefly touch on any past action related to the topic.

- Current Situation

You should illustrate the current situation as it relates to the topic. Have any UN resolutions been recently adopted, proposed, etc. The position your member state takes on the topic will be based on the nation's desires for the resolution of the current situation, so it is paramount that your position paper covers the current situation effectively.

- Key Issues

Identify the key issues surrounding the topic. Attack the key issues from this angle: you want your reader to know what YOU believe is important. Identifying the key issues will also help you extrapolate the most important parts of what is probably a boatload of information. From this point forward, you only want to focus on the things you've identified as most central to the topic in question.

II. Past United Nations Action

This should be the section of your paper where evidence of your research shines. In other words, this is your opportunity to further discuss in detail any of the actions you learned about from your research of the elements in your topic description. In order to successfully present your research, you should strive to identify some themes in past actions and cite those resources you've found to be relevant. Those resources could include UN resolutions, documents and speeches. The key to your position paper is not how many sources you've cited, but rather, how well you've interpreted the sources you've determined to be the most paramount in understanding the topic. This is the section where you should do just that.

III. Delegation Policy

This section provides you with the first opportunity for your nation to take a stand. When you consider your research of the topic and your research of your country, where do the two meet, or even collide? Clearly state your delegation's position on each of the key issues you've previously identified in the paper.

IV. References

Each of your position papers should end with the citation of each source that you used in the composition of your paper. You may use the style of citation to which you are most accustomed.

Tennessee YMCA Model United Nations

General Assembly Committees w/annotated Topic Suggestions

DISARMAMENT AND INTERNATIONAL SECURITY COMMITTEE

Examples of resolutions this committee might hear include:

- 1) Regulation of Biological and Chemical Weapons: Can the UN regulate what weapons are created and why? Should these weapons be possessed and /or used at all?
- 2) Combating Religious Fundamentalist Pressure on Political Stability: Throughout history religion has been named as the cause of countless wars, armed conflicts, civil unrest etc. As the world has seen, religious fundamentalism can bring terrorism and political instability.
- 3) Measures to Combat Terrorism: Terrorism has long been a major problem for many countries. Recently countries are working together to find solutions to this growing problem.

ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL COMMITTEE

Examples of resolutions this committee might hear include:

- 1) Impact of Regional Trading Blocs in Global Trade System: How can the UN promote trade within regions and among the various international trade blocs. Increased traffic through deregulation, lowering of tariffs, lessening of economic embargoes, etc., are ideas to be considered.
- 2) The Rights of Migrant Workers: As migrant workers move from place to place, they are given few rights. What rights exist for migrant workers and how can they be expanded?
- 3) Information Technology: As dependence on technology has expanded, the ability to bring chaos and destruction to essential systems such as air traffic control systems and global computer networks has grown. How can the UN shed light on these problem areas and aid its member states in reducing and/or preventing its effects upon the world's population?
- 4) Recommendations to Improve the Economic Stability of the United Nations: As the debt levels of the United Nations grow, its effectiveness as a peacekeeping force diminishes. The growing debt is partly due to the fact that many member nations, such as the United States, are refusing to contribute all of its share of millions of dollars because of internal political issues. How can the UN entice its members to pay their fair shares for the promotion of peace and other UN endeavors?

SOCIAL, HUMANITARIAN AND CULTURAL COMMITTEE

Examples of resolutions this committee might hear include:

- 1) Protection of Humanitarian Aid Workers: Humanitarian aid workers are often placed in the center of civil strife, war and numerous other dangers. How can the UN increase protection of these vital workers?
- 2) International Regulation of Medicinal Drugs: Whereas rules for testing and use of legal medical drugs vary from country to country, what can the UN do to help regulate the process and distribution of these drugs?

- 3) The Pandemic of Infectious Diseases: Infectious viral diseases are spreading across the globe at an alarming rate. The spread of infectious diseases often results from poor sanitation and education and is often complicated by political strife. Additionally, warring parties who do not permit necessary treatments and aid workers to reach infected areas further complicate this problem. What can the UN do to promote research into viral diseases and how can it help combat the spread of infectious diseases?
- 4) Regulation of Labor by Children and/or Prisoners: Exploitation of this form of labor has been used by numerous governments, countries, and businesses. Regulation by the UN and its pressure upon member states could decrease this problem.

SPECIAL POLITICAL AND DECOLONIZATION COMMITTEE

Examples of resolutions this committee might hear include:

- 1) Measures to Prevent Environmental Atrocities: Man-made destruction of the environment by governments, industry, and/or individuals. How can the UN prevent these types of actions from occurring and punish those persons responsible once they occur?
- 2) Controlling Organized Crimes Across International Borders: Organized crime is not simple a problem inside country borders, increasingly it is flowing across nation-states.
- 3) Measures to Facilitate Peacemaking Efforts in Situations of Civil War: How can the UN ease the difficulties of peace-making as an intermediate, advisor, and/or enforcer of the peace, etc.
- 4) Protection of Tourists: What role should the UN take in protecting tourists as they travel throughout the world's nation states? Should the UN attempt to aid in the protection of tourists who choose to travel in known problem areas?

ADMINISTRATIVE AND BUDGETARY COMMITTEE

Examples of resolutions this committee might hear include:

- 1) Financing of the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina: This type of resolution could be applicable to any nation where the UN is financially supporting a mission of any kind. Is there a better way to do it? Are we spending too much money, etc.? You would write this kind of resolution ABOUT a resolution already being executed.
- 2) Strengthening the Security and Safety of UN Premises: How do we ensure the safety of UN Headquarters and other UN offices? Should we commit funding to make security part of the administration of UN offices? Should we require that nations benefiting from the presence of a UN office provide security for such office?

WRITING YOUR RESOLUTION

Definition:

A resolution is a written proposal that deals with the issues being entertained by a UN committee. In your case, your resolution will need to concern topics that would fall within one of the standing committees being heard at our Model United Nations conference. (You should consult your advisor for a listing of these committees.) Your resolution will first be heard in a sub-committee setting, then ranked. Should you rank well enough to move on to committee, you will present your resolution again for consideration by the committee as a possible resolution to be heard in the Plenary Session of the General Assembly.

PLEASE USE THE RESOLUTION TEMPLATE PROVIDED ON OUR WEBSITE TO TYPE
YOUR RESOLUTION ACCORDING TO THE FOLLOWING GUIDELINES:

Structure:

Resolutions are divided into three parts:

1. Header
2. Preambulatory Clauses
3. Operative Clauses

Here's a further description of what those sections should include:

▪ HEADER

The header will provide the basic information about your resolution purposes, used mainly for administrative purposes by the Secretaries General. (AKA State YIG Office) The template on our website includes a prompt for all of the items required for your header. They are:

Sponsor (Your country)

Delegates (Alphabetical listing of your country members)

Committee (One of the standing committees)

Topic (Of your choosing, so long as it fits into one of our committees)

▪ PREAMBULATORY CLAUSES

These clauses introduce the problem at hand, provide necessary background information, and give a general indication of the attitude of the resolution. You should begin each of your preambulatory clauses with an underlined word, as in the sample resolution found in this manual. Please see the list of sample preambulatory clause beginnings in this manual for some ideas.

▪ OPERATIVE CLAUSES

Your operative clauses should be the meat and potatoes of your resolution. They should outline your ideas and specific proposed actions for the resolution. An operative clause should present your solution or solutions to the problem you're addressing. A good operative clause can be one of many things: original, innovative, concerning policy, and economically and politically feasible. Each of your operative clauses should be numbered, and like your preambulatory clauses, should begin with an underlined word or words. Each clause should end with a semi-colon. Some good examples of operative clause beginnings are: Calls for, Strongly encourages, & Establishes.

MORE TIPS FOR WRITING AN EFFECTIVE RESOLUTION

Provided courtesy of the Memphis University School Government Club

GENERAL BACKGROUND:

The United Nations is a community of its member states. It exists for two general purposes:

- 1) To maintain peace and security, and prevent aggression, amongst nations. The Security Council is the only UN body with the authority to pressure or punish countries through military or economic means.
- 2) To improve the quality of life for the people of the world. This is carried out through one of the dozens of UN organizations and committees.

The United Nations is NOT a world government. It cannot violate the “national sovereignty” of a member nation; that is, the right of a nation to control its own internal affairs. Hence, UN.

SPECIFICS ON RESOLUTIONS:

Resolutions are merely suggestions, requests, or statements of “world opinion.” (The exception to this is the “peace and security” function of the Security Council).

The General Assembly and its committees are the bodies in which all member nations discuss world problems and propose solutions. The purposes of GA resolutions are to define and describe problems and propose solutions. More specifically:

- 1) A resolution may propose that specific nations alter their behavior in order to be in line with principles and guidelines stated in one of the dozens of agreements, treaties, declarations, reports, or protocols that most nations have previously signed. Examples range from the UN Declaration of Human Rights to the Kyoto Protocol on Global Warming to the UN Charter itself, and many, many others. Specific punishments may be suggested, if desired, for nations who are in violation.
- 2) A resolution may call on member nations to adopt by their vote a new position or viewpoint regarding a more specific international issue (for instance to “request action to solve” this or “condemn or oppose” that).
- 3) A resolution may seek to develop and gain approval for a specific program or course of action to be carried out by one of the UN organs (Examples of such organs are the UN Commission on Human Rights, the UN Children’s Emergency Fund, The UN Development Programme, the UN Environment Programme, the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the UN Disarmament Commission, the UN International Drug Control Programme, and many, many more).

A resolution can create a new organization or committee, but be careful because an organ already exists for practically every matter of world concern. (The UN needs creative solutions and will power, not more bureaucracy).

WHAT DO I NEED TO KNOW TO WRITE A GOOD RESOLUTION?

1) Your country's outlook and priorities. Aside from having a general knowledge of your country's geography, culture, economy, government and recent history, there are UN-based sources, such as the book, A Global Agenda: Issues Before the General Assembly of the UN, published annually by the UN Association of the USA (called UNA-USA).

Another very possible "short-cut" would be to go to the web site your country's Permanent Mission to the UN. Here your country issues position statements, as press releases, regarding the selected issues currently before the General Assembly (<http://www.un.int/brazil> or whatever your country is).

2) The pressing issues or needs confronting the UN today, and which would concern your nation directly (as a national or regional need) or indirectly (as a concerned "world citizen").

3) What UN declarations, statements, reports, or protocols now exist concerning your issue or topic. If none exist, then you may propose that a new statement of opinion/goals be adopted. But again, make sure none already exist before doing this.

4) What UN organizations or commissions already exist to deal with your issue or topic.

OTHER THINGS I MIGHT WANT TO KNOW:

There are some topics or problems of general concern about which you may not be writing a position paper. It's a good idea to familiarize yourself with a few of these in order to be an effective delegate in general. Those broad, general topics include: improving health and education, fighting crime or terrorism, promoting economic development (agricultural and industrial or high technology), debt relief for poor nations, reforming the UN system or its finance, protecting the environment, eliminating or limiting weapons of mass destruction, improving the lives or protecting the rights of women and children, assisting refugees fleeing economic or military disasters, and so on.

With these problems of general concern, remember that long-term complex problems require long-term detailed solutions. Hence, in many cases, your resolution alone is probably not going to entirely solve those problems. Think of it as the first, even if limited, step toward a later, more comprehensive solution. Or, your resolution may identify a small, but important, problem that exists with a UN program. In this case, you could propose a specific reform which "fine tunes" that UN program.

Remember that unless a problem is totally unique to your nation or region, or a dire emergency exists, it is not a good idea to personalize an assistance effort (for instance, to improve literacy in my country only). With most problems, such as those related to health, education, or economic development, a large number of country's face those problems in common. So, think in terms of general programs and solutions.

Keep in mind the UN financial resources involved with your plan or solution. You will probably be asked this question in debate. This would be decided by the magnitude or severity of the problem. How extensive is the problem? How many nations and people are affected by it? One idea would be to go to the UN budget and see what the UN organization or commission in question spends on comparable problems. Where does your topic fit in that organization's, or the world's, priorities?

Background & Functions of the Security Council

The Security Council has primary responsibility, under the Charter, for the maintenance of international peace and security. It is so organized as to be able to function continuously, and a representative of each of its members must be present at all times at United Nations Headquarters. When a complaint concerning a threat to peace is brought before it, the Council's first action is usually to recommend to the parties to try to reach agreement by peaceful means. In some cases, the Council itself undertakes investigation and mediation. It may appoint special representatives or request the Secretary-General to do so or to use his good offices. It may set forth principles for a peaceful settlement.

When a dispute leads to fighting, the Council's first concern is to bring it to an end as soon as possible. On many occasions, the Council has issued cease-fire directives which have been instrumental in preventing wider hostilities. It also sends United Nations peace-keeping forces to help reduce tensions in troubled areas, keep opposing forces apart and create conditions of calm in which peaceful settlements may be sought. The Council may decide on enforcement measures, economic sanctions (such as trade embargoes) or collective military action.

A Member State against which preventive or enforcement action has been taken by the Security Council may be suspended from the exercise of the rights and privileges of membership by the General Assembly on the recommendation of the Security Council. A Member State which has persistently violated the principles of the Charter may be expelled from the United Nations by the Assembly on the Council's recommendation.

A State which is a Member of the United Nations but not of the Security Council may participate, without a vote, in its discussions when the Council considers that that country's interests are affected. Both Members of the United Nations and non-members, if they are parties to a dispute being considered by the Council, are invited to take part, without a vote, in the Council's discussions; the Council sets the conditions for participation by a non-member State.

The Functions and Powers of the Security Council

Under the Charter, the functions and powers of the Security Council are:

- to maintain international peace and security in accordance with the principles and purposes of the United Nations;
- to investigate any dispute or situation which might lead to international friction;
- to recommend methods of adjusting such disputes or the terms of settlement;
- to formulate plans for the establishment of a system to regulate armaments;
- to determine the existence of a threat to the peace or act of aggression and to recommend what action should be taken;
- to call on Members to apply economic sanctions and other measures not involving the use of force to prevent or stop aggression;
- to take military action against an aggressor;
- to recommend the admission of new Members;
- to exercise the trusteeship functions of the United Nations in "strategic areas".

SECURITY COUNCIL OVERVIEW

Ethan Link, Parth Sheth, contributing authors

The changes made at previous Model UN conferences will still be in effect. These guidelines were very effective in ensuring that participants left conference with a sense that they had experienced informed discussion on a wide variety of issues facing the actual UNSC. This year should see a continued interest in the less publicized issues facing the Security Council and more balanced participation by those selected to hold the fifteen seats of the Council. The changes made last year are listed below:

- Anyone running for Security Council President MUST have at least one year of experience as a Security Council Delegate. (Service on the SC simultaneously in the election year is sufficient)
- All Security Council Delegates MUST submit research about an issue previously facing the actual SC, in addition to their SC Resolution. (You might want to use the list of assigned resolution topics to find a topic to research that is not assigned to you for your resolution—or you are welcome to research an alternate issue not listed.)
- Those seeking a seat on the SC must have one year of prior experience in the MUN program.
- Security Council Delegates must write a resolution concerning the topic or conflict assigned to their country. The SC member will determine, using issue research, how her/his national character would respond to the assigned issue.

The requirement for prior MUN experience is meant to ensure that all those on the Security Council and those presiding over it will be prepared for and can easily adjust to the more complex procedure and depth of discussion that are not always common procedure in the larger and broader General Assembly. The SC atmosphere might intimidate freshmen with no prior MUN experience.

Past Security Councils have also been weakened because the topics of the resolutions have tended to focus on a few well-publicized issues. Many very important but obscure problems are often overlooked, and the agenda tends to remain very narrow in focus. By assigning world conflicts to different SC nations at random, the relevant issues actually facing the Security that are not usually discussed in our media will be addressed, and participants will garner a more realistic Security Council experience at the conference. Security Council delegates will emerge with a thorough understanding of Council procedure as well as the beliefs and policies of their nation.

Additional Considerations for the Security Council Delegate

- How does your nation approach the world community, the UN, and specifically the Security Council?
- How are relations between your nation and the other Security Council seats, especially the five veto wielding nations?
- Discern your nation's stance on general issues, such as nuclear arms control, national sovereignty, and human rights enforcement.
- Become well acquainted with perennial SC topics, such as the Israeli-Palestine situation, India-Pakistan, and the AIDS crisis.
- If possible, especially if you represent a veto nation, try to learn the SC procedures.
- Clearly define your opinions and interests from those of your UN nation; don't allow personal convictions trump the spirit of your nation's interests.
- Make note of international news and take time to review the media (online newspapers are available) of your nation to better understand how its government and people perceive these events.

The ICJ: A Layman's Explanation

by Christopher Schuller
ICJ President 2002, 2003

The International Court of Justice, located in The Hague, Netherlands, is the judicial arm of the United Nations. U.N. member states bring their disputes before the ICJ, whose jurisdiction is dependent on both states' prior acceptance of whatever verdict the court delivers.

The ICJ does not try war criminals; rather, it resolves what we might call 'civil' disputes in an American trial court: it settles border disagreements, assesses fault for breaches of treaties, and arbitrates questions of interpretation of international law between member states.

In these proceedings, the "Applicant" (plaintiff) and "Respondent" (defendant) each submit their written pleadings, Memorials and Counter-Memorials, respectively, in advance of actual written arguments before the court.

The Court also serves as a judicial advisory body to the General Assembly and Security Council, both of whom may ask the Court for Advisory Opinions regarding specific GA or Security Council resolutions' compliance with the U.N. Charter.

The U.N.'s ICJ consists of thirteen Justices, a President, and a Vice-President.

A Brief Guide to the YMCA Model United Nations International Court of Justice

In the International Court of Justice component of Model United Nations, you and a partner will argue a real-life case before a bench of fellow high school students serving as justices. The below guide is meant to assist you as you prepare the oral and written components of this conference experience.

Memorials and Counter-Memorials

What is a Memorial or Counter-Memorial?

- Memorials and counter-memorials are the written basis for arguments UN member nations make in the International Court of Justice (ICJ).
- Both have essentially the same form (see style and organization instructions below and in memorial/counter-memorial template) and are distinguished only by which nation is submitting one of these documents.

When do we write a Memorial or Counter-Memorial?

- Remember that in the Model UN ICJ, each legal team will represent both sides in a case. Given this, each team must submit both a memorial and a counter-memorial for the case they are given in advance of the conference.
- Each team will write a memorial for when it presents as the applicant and a counter-memorial for when it presents as the respondent.
- The applicant is the nation bringing the dispute or claiming a breach of international law, while the respondent is the nation against which the claim is being brought.
- Example: Portugal v. India – The applicant is always listed first, and the respondent is listed second. In this case, Portugal is the applicant, and India is the respondent. Thus, Model UN legal teams preparing for this case would write a memorial for when they are representing Portugal and a counter-memorial for when they are representing India.

How should we organize our Memorial/Counter-Memorial?

- IMPORTANT: DO NOT PLAGIARIZE
- In most cases, the memorials and counter-memorials used in the real cases are available online. While these are useful resources, you MAY NOT copy them in whole or in part. The justices will be familiar with the actual memorials and counter memorials and will detect any copied sections.
- Your memorial/counter-memorial should have a heading that includes the names of those arguing the case, the country you represent, your school, whether the document is a memorial or counter-memorial, and the name of the case (i.e. Gabčíkovo-Nagymaros Project (Hungary v. Slovakia)). See the memorial/counter-memorial template for more details.
- You should continue by providing a “Statement of Fact” that discusses the factual and objective aspects of the case. Again, with this and subsequent bullet points in this section, refer to the memorial/counter-memorial template for full details.
- Follow that with a list of citations of the international law, treaties and UN Charter sections that you will use in your argument. Beneath each citation, briefly summarize the content of each law, treaty, Charter section, etc.
- Next, make your argument. Here, you should use the facts and pertinent legal documents to present the case from the perspective of the nation on behalf of which you are presenting. This is not a script for your oral presentation, as you will not be allowed to read from your memorial/counter-memorial during your oral arguments. Rather, the written argument should be the framework off which your oral argument is based.

- After your written argument, briefly describe in the submission section what specific findings you hope the Court will reach, using the format provided in the template.
- Be sure to sign your memorial/counter-memorial where indicated in the template
- Once you have finished your memorial/counter-memorial, go back through the template to ensure you have replaced all of the italicized sections with the information appropriate to your country.

Inside the Courtroom: Just Observing

How should we spend our time if we are not presenting?

- If your case is not scheduled first on the docket (the list of the cases in the order the Court will hear them), you should take every opportunity to observe other cases.
- Observing other cases will allow you to learn from the successes and mistakes of other teams.
- Observing will also allow you to get a sense of what types of questions the justices will ask and how the Court operates.

What is the courtroom decorum?

- Inside the courtroom, you are expected to comply with all of the rules outlined in the Delegate's Code of Conduct.
- Communication with fellow delegates or advisors is allowed but should be kept as quiet as possible.
- Cases can last fewer than fifteen minutes or nearly two hours. If you must leave during the case, both the Court and the presenting team would be appreciative if you waited for a lull in the proceedings.

Inside the Courtroom: Presenting Your Case

How does the Court hear cases?

- Each legal team must consist of no more and no fewer than two lawyers
- Teams presenting before the Court will be divided into two divisions: advanced and novice. This ensures those presenting for the first time will only argue against fellow first-time presenters, while those with prior Court experience at Model UN or Youth in Government will be able to argue against similarly experienced teams.
- The Court begins hearing a case by allowing the applicant thirty minutes to present its oral argument.
- The respondent will receive thirty minutes to present its oral argument once the applicant has concluded and the President of the Court has instructed the respondent to begin.
- Either side may ask for additional time if their presentation extends beyond thirty minutes, but such time will only be granted at the discretion of the President.
- While few delegates ever use the entire thirty minutes, applicants and respondents should strive to speak for at least ten minutes. The substance of the presentation, however, is much more important than its length.

- At any time during oral arguments, a justice may interrupt the delegates with a question.
- Maps, posters or copies of legal documents may be used and are encouraged as ways to supplement your oral argument. To use these aides, make copies in advance and approach the Court Liaison regarding their submission prior to your scheduled case time.

What should we do (and not do) when we are presenting our oral argument?

- The first thing to do is relax. If you have researched the case thoroughly, you should be able to deliver a compelling argument and answer any questions posed by the justices.
- Oral argument is not synonymous with memorial/counter-memorial. Do not read from your memorial/counter-memorial. If you do, the justices will stop you.
- Begin your oral argument by greeting the Court. The following would be an appropriate introduction:
 - “Good morning/evening Mr. President, members of the International Court. My name is Tony Blair and my fellow delegate is Gordon Brown. We represent the United Kingdom and are here to argue as the applicant in the case of the Ariel Incident of 27 July 1955, United Kingdom v. Bulgaria.”
- From your introduction, proceed to describe the facts of the case and the international laws and treaties your nation believes to be applicable.
- Your argument must be based on international law. An applicant or respondent that simply presents the facts will likely not win the case.
- If you are the applicant, attempt to predict the argument of the respondent and explain why that argument should not be accepted.
- If you are the respondent, take notes during the applicant’s oral argument and be prepared to rebut the points made in it during your oral argument.
- Conclude your argument by detailing exactly what your nation wants the Court to find in its decision.
- For your conclusion, use language like: “We hope the Court will find that...”
- Justice Questions: When the justices interrupt you with a question (they almost always will), do not lose composure. A question from a justice does not mean that you have made an incorrect statement or that your argument is flawed. Often, justices seek only clarification. At other times, justices may ask about an aspect of the case that you intend to address later in your oral argument. If a justice makes such a query, you may inform the justice of this and ask if you may discuss it at the later point. If you do not know an answer and do not believe you will be able to find one in a timely manner, simply say you are unsure and ask the questioning justice if you may proceed. The justices will appreciate your honesty.
- When addressing the Court President, use the phrase “Mister/Madame President...”
- When addressing a justice, use the phrase “Justice (last name of justice)...”
- Placards will be placed on the bench so you know the names of the justices

Resources

Where can we find information about our case?

- The United Nations website (www.un.org) can provide you with a tremendous amount of information for your memorial/counter-memorial and oral argument.
- All delegates, especially those arguing before the Court, should be familiar with the United Nations Charter.
- Information on specific cases is available on the ICJ section of the UN website. This link will take you to a chronological listing of all ICJ cases:
<http://www.icj-cij.org/docket/index.php?p1=3&p2=2>
- Click on the “More...” link beneath a case to see a summary, rulings (where available), the actual memorial and counter-memorial and more.
- IMPORTANT: Although the International Court of Justice has already ruled on some of the cases that will be argued at the conference, the Model UN ICJ will hear each case as if no ruling has yet been issued. Rulings, therefore, should not be used as evidence at Model UN.
- If you are having trouble understanding your case, or if you have questions about Court procedure, you may feel free to contact me at: charles.w.crawford@williams.edu or (901) 569-0035

I hope this guide will be an asset when you research and prepare your case. I wish you the best of luck at the conference! If you will be at Conference B, I look forward to meeting you and assisting you over the course of the weekend.
